FAMILY TREE

Other members of the family have been talking to me for several years about having a FAMILY TREE. I have also thought that several facts concerning our ancestry should be preserved. As a result the facts concerning the family were gathered in 1958 and 1959 and many hours were spent in gathering facts, and many letters were written.

Because many of the records are incomplete there are many facts that are missing and there is a question about the accuracy of some of the dates. Beginning with the life of Joel E. Thomson, however, the record is much more accurate than for the earlier years.

The facts presented herein cover a period of 215 years, involving 9 generations and 291 members in direct line of descent and 114 members by adoption through marriage.

A copy of this family tree is being presented to the DeKalb County Library in Auburn, Ind., the copy being mailed to Walter C. Manon, Clerk of DeKalb County, Ind.

A copy is also being sent to the Genealogy Division of the Indiana State Library in Indianapolis. The copy will be received by Carolynne L. Wendell who is Head of the Genealogy Division of the State Library.

Edward Everett's

"It is better to be a good ancestor, than to have ancestors."

His life and medical discoveries are shown in his "New Guide To Health," published in 1835, and are on record at the Lloyd Library in Cincinnati, Ohio. There were five sons and three daughters born to this union but we have the names of Samuel, John, JOEL, and Cyrus only.

DR. SAMUEL THOMSON'S OINTMENT
(Grandpa's Salve)

"Grandpa's Salve", as perfected by Dr. Samuel Thomson, has been somewhat of a family tradition and has been handed down through the succeeding generations of the family. The receipe is as follows:

Take $1\frac{1}{2}$ pounds of lard
 $\frac{3}{4}$ pound rosin
 $\frac{1}{2}$ pound beeswax
1 oz oil of spike

Place ingredients in a pan and simmer until all is melted.
Set back to cool and the salve is ready to use.

Marguerite
Rempis

(Death
1996
April)

Margie Braunstein took polio peacefully

For 44 years, Marguerite "Margie" Braunstein could move nothing but her head from side to side or up and down. She was 30 years old, married, and the mother of a 5-year-old daughter when she was stricken with polio on Christmas Day, 1952. She spent the next two years in an iron lung, and the rest of her life on a sophisticated ventilator system to keep her breathing.

But until her death on Friday at the age of 74, she never complained. What was the point? Complaining wouldn't change anything. And, as she pointed out to her sister, Barbara, "It is difficult enough for the people taking care of me without my being negative or hard to get along with."

Once, years ago, friends took her to see evangelists Aimee Semple McPherson and Oral Roberts. She was not cured, of course, but explained evenly and without rancor that her healing was the acceptance of her disability and making the best that she could of the situation.

To Margie, that meant watching her diet so she wouldn't put on weight that would impede her already labored breathing and make her more difficult to lift; exploring the far reaches of her mind and her world to keep herself interested and interesting; fighting for disability rights; and smiling nearly all of the time.

She grew up in Waterloo, Ind., and came to California with her first husband in 1945. They divorced soon after, and Margie married merchant marine Herbert "Red" Braunstein. They settled in Norwalk and had a daughter.

Lack of mobility did not translate to lack of discipline, and Margie was a strict mom. Chores had to be done before going out to play, and there was no getting away with secret activities in another room. Margie didn't have ears; she had sonar devices that picked up every sound, every murmur, every even-in-your-softest-slippers footfall.

Her speech was labored and limited because of her breathing difficulties, but her facial expressions spoke volumes. Sometimes she didn't need to speak. She could just roll her eyes, wrinkle her nose, squint or scowl to get her point across.

She hated country music, loved musicals and classical tunes, read voraciously, and even devoured an encyclopedia Red bought her. She thought an electric wheelchair would be a waste of money, and was content to be pushed by her 24-hour-caretakers. Her days were filled with reading and writing. She used a mouth stick to type letters, and kept up a lively correspondence with many far-away friends and relatives.

She is survived by her husband, Red; daughter, Jan Corpany; brother, William C. Rempis; sister, Barbara Teller.

Funeral services are 1 p.m. today, Rose Hills Memorial Park, 3900 S. Workman Mill Road, Whittier.
